the Norfolk and Western Railway, express Shipments were handled by "It has always been customary when rates were not in effect, to make the charge equal to the sum of local charge equal to the sum of local charges for each company. Under the new plan, when it goes into effect, the charges between all offices will be the same as if one company had carried the package from shipping point to same as if one company had carried the package from shipping point to same as if one company had carried the package from shipping point to same as if one company had carried the package from shipping point to same as if one company had carried the package from shipping point to same as if one company. Under the package from shipping point to same as if one company. Under the package into effect, the charges between all offices will be the charges between all off the package from shipping point to destination."

This decision of the express com-panies is believed to be a net outcome of recent investigations by the Inter-state Commerce Commission into the rates and practices of thirteen companies. Many complaints were made to the commission and the "double-graduate charge" was pointed out as one of the most obnoxious methods.
